

Man on the Moon

Bush says he wants his country to put Americans on the Moon again shortly. Meanwhile, American headquarters in Baghdad is targeted by a suicide attack with 24 dead, mostly Iraqis.

John Kerry

The senator from Massachusetts will be the Democrat candidate for the forthcoming Presidential election against George W. Bush, who calls an election earlier than expected, because of bad polls.

Liars

Under pressure from the Democrat opposition, the White House agrees to put together an independent commission of inquiry about the CIA's successive failures regarding the weapons of mass destruction issue.

The cat among the pigeons

Former Treasury secretary Paul O'Neill publishes a book called 'The Price of Loyalty' in which he draws a vitriolic portrait of the Republican administration in place in Washington. He describes his former boss as a 'blind man surrounded by deaf people' and confirms that the Iraqi weapons of mass destruction story was a hoax made up from start to finish in order to justify the war.

